

EDMONTON EXPERT HERE TO STUDY OIL SITUATION

Campbell M. Hunter, O.B.E.
To Report on Alberta
Prospects

Recognised as one of the outstanding petroleum geologists in the British empire, Campbell M. Hunter, O.B.E., arrived in Edmonton on Wednesday from London, England, via Cunard, and in the next few days will make a survey of the Wanwright and Rhineland areas from an oil development viewpoint. He has already visited the Turner Valley fields.

The British oil expert has been retained by a group of oilmen in this city to study properties in which they have already taken an interest, and his final report, which will be submitted to the government, will depend as to future development in the area.

Finnish Ready

Campbell Hunter is accompanied by Claude J. Fisher, Canadian news resident in London, who is acting as his legal counsel.

"London is prepared to finance any oil developments with the recommendation of Campbell Hunter," said Fisher. "This is all we can do at the present time. We have had no report. If it is favourable we will immediately start work on the oil fields in the hole. If they bring in any oil the situation will have solved itself again.

Campbell Hunter, the British expert, was retained by the Pan American Petroleum company on the Turner Valley fields, and the cost of his report that corporation invested much $40,000 in Venezuela with much success.

To Visit Wanwright

The British expert will visit Wanwright, the oil field headquarters of the original developers of the British Petroleum Company, and will be most interested in the Rhineland area, where he will make preliminary development for some time.

On his way to Edmonton and Calgary Campbell Hunter had access to all the information available on the Oilfields Departmental relative to all development in Western Canada. He is also well informed on the time validity only the Turner Valley fields.

"As Campbell Hunter is due back in London by June 1 there is not time to waste in getting the oil wells drilled and we are confining ourselves to those sections which might bring in oil. We are already partially developed," said Mr. Fisher.

"The party will leave for the Wanwright and Rhineland fields the next few days.

the members of the family who are coming to look over the situation take up residence in the city. They want to know what is going to happen to their son on every farm. Other people who are concerned are interested.

A few of the lads of the village at the hotel last night were asked if they thought that it was a good idea to play bridge.

To which Sammy Campbell made a short speech. "It is a good way to prevent your rents from lagging at all hours is to put them up afterwards."

The game broke up just then.

Geoff. Lafferty, who came up from the south to get his girl ready for the once-over, discovered at a quiet moment to his dismay that it is the only honky-tonk on the one-and-a-half-mile stretch of Main Street with a sufficient number of customers over a chair.

Eddie Truettbridge, who gets Australian more times on the radio than any other man in the country in capacity, has another claim to fame. Eddie, who is now based in New York City, 2nd and Avenue, was not aware he was prove it.

According to Lafferty, Eddie, after arriving in answer to a young girl's call, arrested one man and got him to sign a confession and get manning away. The detective, however, admitted he had been fighting.

"With a friend," he explained. "I was a few drinks." Asked the friend's name he was unable to give it.

Miss Edmonton Meets the Mayor

ASSINIBOINE RIVER RAISE NOT ABATING

CANADA PRESS
WINNIPEG, May 4.—The Assiniboine river at Brandon, Man., has risen very slowly during the past 24 hours—only an inch and a half—but officials still believe that the flood may yet reach record height of 25 feet above normal. Within a few days it is expected that the full force will be felt when the swollen Qu'Appelle joins the Assiniboine.

The highest street highway along the Assiniboine road leading to the industrial school and the experimental farm is under water.

The water was more or less stationary yesterday, but the movement is increasing.

The river is still 21 inches below the flood peak of 1922.

Miss Edmonton met Mayor A. U. G. Bury and other civic officials at the city hall Tuesday. She is shown here shaking hands with the mayor.

danger but the landlord was not responsible to the man who accepted the lease to use the house.

"Watt knew exactly the condition of the vestibule. He had been there three times. The entrance was exactly as it is now. He knew the size of the basement and height of the windows. He knew the obligation imposed upon the defendant to supply light to the vestibule and there was no contract entered into which would have relieved him of this duty," he continued.

Acres in Diamond

"I therefore dismiss the action in that regard, including costs of the trial," he said.

"I trust everything is now in shape for the trial to proceed as quickly as possible," he said.

He also advised that the plaintiff will be granted a new trial if he so desires.

Jury Returns Verdict

Vernon H. F. Farnham was returned in favor of Mrs. Irene Adams, widow of the late Mr. Adams, deceased, court decided.

The jury awarded $15,000 to the widow of the late Mr. Adams.

On Tuesday morning, H. H. Parsons, a Canadian lawyer, filed a motion for a continuance of the case.

On Wednesday, Justice W. H. Farnham reserved judgment until after the case had gone to the jury.

He agreed to hear a motion for the entering of a verdict on the record at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Case of Action

The case was given to the jury at 10 a.m. Wednesday morning. The jurors were recalled for some time to consider their verdict.

They brought in the verdict about 6 o'clock.

Verdict Given

Mr. Watt, following the death of his wife, Mrs. Thelma Watt, in the main vestibule of the Adams building, fell down a staircase in the early morning of June 1 last. The case was set for trial before Justice W. H. Parsons at 10 a.m. on June 29 and was adjourned to a hearing on June 30.

After several hours in the course of the trial, he returned severe, and was forced into a hospital to ask questions on points of law, then returned to the courtroom.

Disposition Discreet

The case was set for trial on June 30.

Mr. Parsons, however, adjourned the case to trial on Monday last.

Conference Held

Following the adjournment, the opposing counsel and the trial judge, Mr. H. P. Turner, met with the defense lawyers upon submission to the jury and which form of verdict was desired.

Neil D. MacLean, attorney for plaintiff, and Mr. C. L. Freeman for defendants.

Russian Delegates

Following the adjournment, the defense organization which performs perfectly every service for their members.

MISS EDMONTON PACKS THEATRE

Miss Edmonton spent a busy day Tuesday preparing for her departure at the Capitol theatre, Calgary.

The entrance was closed and the stage was draped in red curtains.

Miss Edmonton was dressed in a red gown.

She will compete for the title of Miss America.

Miss Edmonton was greeted by another actress, Mrs. Anna Lee, who is also competing for the title.

Making her final appearance in the city, Miss Edmonton was greeted by another actress, Mrs. Anna Lee, who is also competing for the title.

Miss Edmonton leaves at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

All of Us Hate to Be Questioned—We Resent Prying Into Our Private Affairs—But Remember, Parents, This Feeling is Intense With Youth, So Don't Drive.

The Young People From Home With Family Curiosity

The other day a young girl tried to commit suicide by jumping into a river. When asked what her explanation was she gave for her desperate deed was that she couldn't stand up to the constant nagging by the mother who saw she lived.

"I don't want to do anything wrong," she said, "I would a little independent, I would like to have my own way without being asked every time I start out on my own." She was talking about going with and why I am going and how long am I going to stay and when I come back. I don't know what I am doing but I am going to be so watched and spied upon."

To which the saint replied that she had no idea what she was talking about, she hadn't intended to persecute her but was merely trying to do her duty and take care of her.

I do not know how it strikes you, but to me it seems that the more you try to keep as you could read in a day's scanning of the papers, the more you are bound to have youth with all sorts of heresies, thumbing and yearning for freedom, for a change, for a new life. And the other hand pushing it back into the cage and locking the door upon it for fear it might get away.

And here we then they make ready. For in its execution at being hampered and thwarted at every turn, youth feels that it owes to life. It forgets that the hand that restrains is also the hand that fed and nurtured, that it was born, educated and nurtured and that it has bestowed upon it a thousand kindnesses.

So youth is ungrateful and age resentful, for age also has forgotten many things that youth's parents and the nation's fathers did, with which it guards the privacy of its soul.

Of course, this girl who preferred death to being perpetually caged about everything that she wanted, her parents' love and the nation's, with which it guards the privacy of its soul.

But there is probably no other one thing so alienates parents and children as does the desire to drive the young people away from home and does family curiosity.

For it is true that to the average home no one can come or go without furnishing an alibi for every minute of their absence. No one can make the world understand that he or she is not at home, that he or she is going to do it.

No one can make the smallest purchase without giving a reason for it and telling its cost all the while it was bought and why it was bought. And the more you try to keep it secret the more you are bound up without it becoming a matter of debate.

In short, the more you try to keep it secret the more you are bound up without it becoming a matter of debate.

It is the same with the pinpricks of this eternal questioning, but it never ceases to irritate us, and to youth, which is thin-skinned, it is like a blow.

Last year in Little Rock, capital of bondage, is the inevitable price that we pay for family life and that very often it is worth the freedom it gives us. But the price is high, and the more you try to keep it secret the more you are bound up without it becoming a matter of debate.

And here we then they make ready. For in its execution at being hampered and thwarted at every turn, youth feels that it owes to life. It forgets that the hand that restrains is also the hand that fed and nurtured, that it was born, educated and nurtured and that it has bestowed upon it a thousand kindnesses.

The remedy lie in parents recognizing the futility of putting their children in cages and in teachers recognizing the futility of infuriating the youngsters and does no good. For if Mamie and Johnny are merely going to the corner drug store to get an ice-cream soda it is not necessary for them to be sent to the principal's office. If they are going if they get any particular kick about doing it on their own initiative, then the teacher should be asked to call the parents in for a conference, and if it is made known that they are going to be sent to a questionable resort, they are certainly not going to tell the truth about their movements.

"But I have a right to know where my children go and what they are doing," say the parents. But the only way you can find out is to ask the children voluntarily to confide in you. You can't write the information down by high-handed methods nor tag it out of them by questioning them.

I know one wise mother who says that she has bitten off the end of her tongue in efforts to prevent herself from questioning her children about their movements. But invariably her tongue is still there when they are going when they kiss her good-by.

Why we should all hate so much to be questioned nobody knows, but it is the same with the desire to drive the young people away from home and does family curiosity.

It is the same with the pinpricks of this eternal questioning, but it never ceases to irritate us, and to youth, which is thin-skinned, it is like a blow.

Five Persons Injured In Minnesota Tomato

Associated Press

ANNANDALE, Minn., May 4.—Five persons were injured, two seriously, and buildings at nine farms were damaged by a funnel-shaped cloud which struck near here, late Monday.

Damage was of minor character.

The storm, preceded by a funnel-shaped cloud, was accompanied by hail and according to reports had been of short duration.

The damage was scattered over a wide area, about half a mile east of Fairhaven and continued in a northeasterly direction.

MARKETS, GRAIN, FINANCIAL

MAY WHEAT IS SOARING HIGH

RANGE IN GRAIN PRICES

By James Richardson & Sons

Canadian Press
WINNIPEG, May 4.—A sharp rise in wheat prices in the closing minutes of today's market carried May wheat to $13.50 per bushel, the highest price since the spring, and gave the other futures a pronounced upward trend.
But, however, failed to hold and closing values reacted to a certain extent, with the market ending at $13.25 per bushel.
The adverse weather in Western Canada has been a factor.
Moderate export business was worked up again yesterday, and the Canadian pool was a fair seller at the top price.
The grain market, which has turned the feature of the course grain.
